Ragg Lonsdale. It's not surprising that someone who'd operated at the highest levels of the US Army and Philippines government and had strong political connections before World War II, hugely influenced the government of Australia including manipulating the requests for reinforcements it sent to the US government to his advantage and seriously considered running against FDR during World War II before going on to become the de-facto leader of Japan for five years would be impossible to control by His links with the Republican Party should also be fleshed out a bit. It might come back to haunt you 2.
